CHEMICAL PRACTICE/INTERNATIONAL AND FOREIGN LAW (JOINT MEETING)

The joint committee will focus on India. India is fast developing as a major economic power house, generating broad interest among U.S. and multinational companies. At the same time, new patent laws came into effect in India in 2005. Primarily, the changes involved harmonizing with the patent laws in major international jurisdictions and bringing the law into compliance with the WTO requirements. Some of significant changes involve the Chemical/Pharma industries and Biotech industries, including: 1) product patents were now allowed in these categories for the full term of 20 years from the filing date; 2) Section 3(d) now excludes new forms of existing compounds as patentable subject matter, and is generating a lot of discussions and is proving to be controversial; 3) the new law allows patents for living microorganisms. This program will explore how the nascent provisions of the patent laws in India are put to practice by the Indian patent office as well as the courts. Attendees with business interest in India will find information provided in this program will likely facilitate strategy formation and exploiting business opportunities in India.

Panelists will cover the following areas of significant interest to the practitioners in the US:

1) Discussion on WTO provisions related to polymorph patents (patents for a specific crystalline form of a known compound) and living organisms patents; 2) State of the law and practice related to polymorph patents and patents on new forms of a known composition in the US and other countries outside India; 3) Discussion on Section 3 (d) of the Indian patent law and its impact to companies operating in India. Case studies involving some current issues in India relating to section 3(d) and its implementation in practice, for example, the Glivac case. Expert comments on how this issue is likely to shape up in the future; 4) State of the law and practice related to living organism patents in US and other countries outside of India; 5) Discussion on the patentability of biotechnology inventions in India, with emphasis on patentability of living organisms. Discussions on the Diminaco Ag case and its impact. Expert comments on the future of biotechnology patents.

PATENT LAW

A number of district courts have grappled with the application of injunctive relief in post-eBay patent infringement cases. Several early decisions rejected requests for injunctive relief in instances where a patent owner is not practicing his invention. The potential reach of this rule, however, remains unclear. By way of example, if a patent owner is engaged in business but is not practicing a particular patent, would injunctive relief be available to him? Should it be available?

During the Mid-Winter meeting the committee will be presenting members with an overview of the jurisdictions that have examined the injunctive relief issue, the outcome in representative cases, developing trends, and noteworthy questions that remain. Steve Malin of Sidley Austin, David Ruschke, Senior Patent Counsel to Medtronic, Inc, and possibly a third panelist will be on hand to provide the overview and their perspectives concerning this issue. If time permits, the committee will also discuss a number of projects that will soon be moving forward.

PATENT LITIGATION

Our meeting will start with a review of significant and/or interesting patent cases from 2006. Professor Tim Holbrook, Associate Professor of Law, Associate Director – Program in Intellectual Property Law, Chicago – Kent College of Law (<http://www.kentlaw.edu/classes/tholbroo>), will present a year in review highlighting these cases. This promises to be a very interesting and informative presentation.

The last portion of our meeting will be devoted to committee business. In particular, we will review the status of the following subcommittees:

1) Judicial Efficiency; 2) Model Jury Instructions; 3) Offer of Confidential Access; 4) Website Design; 5) Sedona Recommendations on Markman Procedures

We also hope to establish other working committees, such as a subcommittee devoted to ITC practice. Please come with your ideas and suggestions for further work that can be done by our committee. Remember, the AIPLA only functions when its members are active and contribute to committee work. Please come to our meeting and make suggestions and comments and volunteer for one of our interesting projects.
